In its simplest form, respect for persons maintains that human beings have intrinsic and unconditional moral worth and should always be treated as if there is nothing of greater value than they are. This principle rests on the unique capability of human beings to behave as rational agents, that is, self-aware and capable of objective thought and the ability to reason. The ability to reason is believed to give humanity an intrinsic dignity that must be respected above all other considerations.

Academic excellence is the demonstrated ability to perform, achieve, and/or excel in scholastic activities. Academic excellence has been identified with achieving high grades and superior performance; however, academic excellence is more than just making good grades. It is the maximum development of your intellectual capacities and skills in service to humanity.

Unity is when we come together with other individuals or groups to form something greater than any of us. Unity is often built around a common purpose – a harmony of interests or values that create a shared identity. When people are united by shared values and goals, they can move together, synchronizing their efforts to attain things that none could attain alone. Unity is inclusive. It frees us from the divisiveness of prejudice. We see our commonality without devaluing our differences. A sense of unity can transcend our fear of each other. In unity, the joy of one is the joy of all, and the hurt of one is the hurt of all; the honor of one is the honor of all.

Community Service

stated, "Everyone can be great because anyone can serve." Community service is paramount to any organization. It is one of the thriving forces that will maintain a healthy morale among those who readily practice it. Serving the community shows that there is an appreciation for what has been given as well as respect for what is to come.
